PROF. QUIT EATING BREAKFAST OVER TWO YEARS AGO

Average Man Eats Too Much and Too Rapidly—How Fast Was of the Fast—Exercise and Baths—A Signed Statement.

* * * * *

The first authoritative statement made by Prof. E. E. Purin-inton, formerly of Granville, after he began his 30 day fast at Morgantown, W. Va., was published in the Advocate on Saturday, Aug. 2.
The substance of Prof. Purinton's signed article was sent from Newark and appeared in many metropolitan Sunday morning papers the following day. At the time of that publication, the Advocate addressed a letter to the young scientist, who is a son of the former president of Denison university at Granville, requesting him, upon completion of the fast, to furnish a second article describing more minutely his fast experience. The fast ended successfully last Saturday, the results being all that the young professor hoped for.

Though he ate nothing whatever for 30 days he emerged from the fast feeling well and strong, keener mentally and more buoyant than he had been for ten years. On the 24th day of the fast Prof. Purinton took an all day tramp over the mountains of West Virginia, returning late at night less tired than were his companions who had eaten over 60 meals since he had tasted a bite.

The Advocate addressed a number of questions to the Professor which he has embodied in his article with their answers. The statement which appears below in full is worth reading. It not only describes in detail many interesting points of the long fast, and tells of the happy results attained, but also gives a list of what the scientist regards as injurious foods with a list of substitutes for them.

This special article is exclusively published today in the Advocate:

* * * * *

Morgantown, W. Va., Aug. 11.—The Advocate's recent courtesy requesting an additional statement at the close of my 30day fast, including among others the following questions:

1. What has been the loss in weight?
2. What sort of diet do you use in breaking the fast?
3. How will the fast affect your regular diet?
4. What foods do you regard as specially injurious?
5. Was the fast accompanied by systematic exercise and frequent baths?
6. How does your strength compare with that before the fast was begun?

I am glad to consider first the special points of query and then others, briefly, of minor importance.

LOST A POUND A DAY.

1. The weight on Saturday, just before breaking the fast, was 124½ as against 155, the usual figure. The average loss per diem through the thirty days has been one pound, but I expect to gain within the next ten days more than enough to compensate. Inasmuch as the loss in weight always indicates, approximately at least, the amount of impurities present in the body before the Fast, this thirty pounds is a good riddance.

THE FIRST BITE.

2. The first breakfast was a dish of "Force" and cream, taken at 9 on Saturday. It took more than thirty minutes to finish this single dish, and 700 chews were required for the first three spoonfuls before complete liquefaction occurred.

Compare with this process of natural hunger, the average gastronomic spurt of the restaurant victim, who engulfs in less than half the time a medley of cakes, coffee, and crullers, and you get a faint idea of the salutary suicide's favorite means of shutting off. I have always contended that normal hunger makes it a physical and psychical impossibility for a rational being to bolt his food—a hungry man can't desecrate mastication. And now I've proved it.

IT WAS DELICIOUS.

As for epicurean ecstasy, frog's legs, and peacocks tongues wouldn't cast a shadow on that first morsel of simple cereal. Before the fast I never cared for "Force"—it's too nearly natural a food, for a food without frills doesn't appeal to the average pampered and perverted appetite. The rubicund flare of the catsup bottle is always reflected in the face of the consumer; and a picky tongue and vinegary temper are the human translation of inhuman fare.

But the child-taste chooses fruits and nuts and grains and vegetables, and the radiant spontaneity of the child-nature is but the outward expression of the sun-thrilled nutriment it loves until impulse is choked out.

THE SECOND MEAL.

The second meal, taken six hours after breakfast, consisted of poached egg, wheat wafer and apple-sauce—rather large allowance following so long a fast. But as my stomach, naturally strong, was less weakened than is usual where no fruit-juice was taken, and as I am sufficiently a Mental Scientist to dominate it anyway, I simply ate what hunger craved, ate it right, and commanded digestion.

NEVER EATS BREAKFAST.

3. The fast will not affect my former diet materially, as I had long ago outgrown the three meal folly of my remote-farmer fathers. For two years I have taken no breakfast and shall never take another. Luncheon at 11 or 12, consists of but two or three articles, usually fresh fruits and nuts, with perhaps a crisp cereal product and enough change to preclude monotony. This meal is always eaten in solitude and with enough thrills of auto-suggestion to transmute every atom of pure nutrient into the blood and nerve and brain I'll need for a victorious afternoon's work. Perfect mastication demands a full half hour for eating and perfect digestion another twenty minutes for post-prandial relaxation. That leaves still ten minutes out of the hour nooning, and I spend that sauntering leisurely back to the office, and plying every man I meet, as he bursts frantically from the restaurant and "quick lunch" room and saloon—sandwich dispensary—beetle with the fever of undigested food and unadjusted business.

PEOPLE EAT TOO MUCH.

At 6 comes a comparatively light dinner, though always as heavy as hunger dictates, and composed of foods I specially like;—having found some years ago that the palate needed educating in a way that our extraneous, superfluous and abortive college curriculum doesn't provide for, I set to work to train it. And now the taste is a pretty accurate guide and far more satisfactory than the cut-and-dried sawdust, sterilized and predigested by some crank dietist. The fast has taught me however, that a man can live just as well and work and think far better on about one-fifth of what the unthinking omnivora stow away for disease to pray upon.

I grant that to an average mediocre eater, a fast is a revelation. Several Truthseekers in Morgantown have taken fasts under my direction, and have found at the close that the world has been transformed all of a sudden and their lives transfigured. When you begin to cultivate the subliminal self and listen to its whispers—as you must during the long fast, then the grossly objective must dwindle and disappear; and with it, custom and habit and fashion and conventionality and tradition and creed.

INJURIOUS FOODS.

4. I do not "regard" any foods as "specially injurious." I either know—or don't know until I've studied some more, that ALL foods are either wholesome or poisonous. Of course there is a varying degree of fatality, and the species of refuse named first in the following list are perhaps more speedily suicidal than the others: Pork, lard, spices, coffee and tea, vinegar, French soups, white flour in any form, rich gravies, oysters, sea food, salt meats, mushy dishes (oatmeal, Breakfast foods, etc.), beef tea, chowders, cod liver oil and all its multifarious kin, cocoa (the ordinary kind with potash and an excess of sweet and fat), desserts as commonly made, preserves likewise, pastry likewise, iced and foaming drinks, raw water, soda fountain allurements, cucumbers, underdone and undergrown meats (the latter meaning such as lamb and veal), liver, kidneys and other sewer-systems, catsups of all kinds, composite foods, products artificially prepared (potatoes, meat, vegetables, stewed fruit, flour, etc., as cooked by ignorant maids and restaurateurs), canned meats, soups, etc. You ask for the bare list, and I give it in part, without why or wherefore. I may mention incidentally that the place of most of these articles is more than filled, both as to taste and food-value by wholesome and inexpensive equivalents.

HERE ARE THE SUBSTITUTES.

That of lard by cotton-seed oil or olive oil or Ko-Nut or Wesson's Cooking Oil; that of condiments by their ORGANIC equivalents—mint, nasturtium, pepper-grass, Lahmann's

Sir Liang himself was educated at Andover, Mass. CROWN PRINCE

PROMISES TO MARRY AMERICAN GIRL

Says This Morning's LaMatin at Paris,
The Young Woman is Miss Deacon.

Paris, Aug. 12.—La Matin says the German crown prince, Frederick Wilhelm, has promised to marry Miss Gladys Deacon, an American girl, daughter of the late Edward Parker Deacon. La Matin heads the article "Two Eagles, America and Germany." Gladys's father killed Emile Abeille, a wealthy Frenchman at Cannes, France, in 1892. He charged Abeille with being intimate with Mrs. Deacon.

The paper adds that Miss Deacon told Prince Frederick William that she would never consent to a morganatic alliance, and if he desired to marry her a religious, legal ceremony would be necessary.

Three days after Miss Deacon's avowal the crown prince presented her with a ring, which he had sworn to give to nobody except his wife, it being a present he had received from his grandmother, the late Empress Frederick.

Bowen says he cabled the Cincinnati to return from Curacao to Venezuela without delay. He notes that the Topeka is at Puerto Cabello and the Marietta up the Orinoco. Acting Secretary Darling, of the navy department, sent this dispatch to Commander McLean of the Cincinnati, which arrived at Puerto Cabello this morning: "Vessel needed immediately at Barcelona."

of Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Thirteen days have elapsed since the murder of Minnie Mitchell, thirty-six since old Mrs. Annie Bartholin's life was severed by the hand of the assassin who clutched her throat. Both bodies have been found together with numerous clues pointing toward Wm. Bartholin as the alleged author of both crimes. Yet little or nothing has been accomplished toward learning the motive that prompted either deed, the means employed or the fate that has befallen Wm. Bartholin, although various reports have located him being about the country. This morning an individual answering the description of Bartholin was arrested at Kenosha, Wis. A person who knows Bartholin has been sent to identify the prisoner. Massachusetts has 4,500 registered physicians.

ROOSEVELT THE ONLY PRINCIPLE

The one great moral idea of the party of great moral ideas is Roosevelt for 1904.

All the party conventions, all the party organs busy themselves two years in advance in lauding Roosevelt and "fixing things" for his nomination in 1904 to the exclusion of everything else.

"Great" Roosevelt and greatly to be praised," but as for the trusts and the tariff which is their prolific mother, as for arbitrary and despotic rule in the Philippines, as for anything and everything involving principles and public policy, let there be silence. "Keep still" is the word. People are admonished that they must say nothing about the Philippine policy, the tariff or anything else pertaining to national affairs.

Roosevelt has declared in his strenuous way that no guilty man in the Philippines must escape. He has permitted himself to be quoted as saying that the tariff must be revised—some time and in some way. He has invoked his attorney general in a strenuous fistfight encounter over the question of clubbing trusts with injunctions.

Now let us trust him to attend to all these and all other things. Is he not a mighty and a wise man? Shall we presume to discuss anything that he is attending to?

True, there does not seem to be much activity in discovering and punishing the guilty men in the Philippines. True, some officers who openly defend the policy of torture and extermination are rewarded with promotion and merely cautioned not to talk too much. True, the trust offenders are not punished for what they have done, and only for a little sham talk has been heard about preventing them from doing so any more.

But what of all that? Is it not our business to accept all the promises and professions of Roosevelt at their face value and say nothing while we wait for the performance? Is it not our business to trust him implicitly in everything and give him a term of his own in 1904? To be sure.

So all the organs and all the leaders tell us we must not discuss any public question. We must leave the administration to commit the country to anything it likes and say nothing but hosanna to Roosevelt, who is above all criticism and who "works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

DEMORALIZED CONDITIONS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

The Philippine "Christian Advocate" issued at Manila, is edited by Rev. L. L. McLaughlin of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In its issue of July 1 there is a chapter of American occupation of the Philippines that does not appear in any of the official reports, yet it is instructive, especially as it is from authority beyond dispute. We quote:

"The Twenty-fourth regiment (colored) has completed its term of service in the Philippines and has been ordered home. Three companies have already gone, and the remainder are being mobilized in Manila preparatory to embarkation. This regiment has been doing garrison duty for several months, and as has been a too free custom with the American army, many of these soldiers have been consorting with the native women; many have bound these women by promises of marriage, others have already been legally married, while by far the greater number have been living in concubinage pure and simple. Now comes the order, and the men are being sent home. It is a sad sight to see these women, some with children in their arms, bewailing their abandonment. It is perfectly safe to say there are hundreds of such forsaken women here today, in disgrace among their own people, who at one time thought themselves honored wives. This thing is a lasting shame on our service, and yet there are commanding officers who have openly favored it because, as they say, tending to better discipline in the army."

"There is nothing surprising in this. It has been the story of war by the Caucasian race in the tropics for all time. It was before us when we occupied the Philippines. It is demoralization, vice and crime for all races. Is it an American missionary enterprise?"

Mr. Bryan's very latest and most emphatic renunciation that he has any idea on the Democratic presidential nomination in 1904 should satisfy the most doubting Thomas. It was delivered at Muscatine, Iowa, and was accompanied with congratulations to the Iowa Republicans that they were at last nearing the Bryan platform on the tariff and trusts. "Nine years ago," said Mr. Bryan, "I introduced a bill into Congress exactly along this same line, taking the tariff off trust-made goods, and, although the indorsement comes a little late, I am glad to note that even after nine years, the Republicans of Iowa have come to my way of thinking."

MOB Battered Down The Jail Door

And They Quickly Lynched Two Murderers.

THE LYNCHERS WERE PROPERLY OFFICERED.

MEN'S CRIME ONLY A WEEK OLD

George Johnson Hearing Noise in Hen Roost Went to Investigate and Died.

Lexington, Mo., Aug. 12—At 1:30 this morning a mob of 300 masked men battered down the door of the jail located in the court yard here, secured Charles Salys, white, and Parry Gates colored, who a week ago murdered George W. Johnson, and banged them to a tree a short distance south of town. The lynchers were properly officered. A large crowd assembled while the mob was breaking into the jail. Gates was found shot in the right hip, where Johnson's shot struck him. Salys in a statement said that Gates had done the murder, having fired three shots. Johnson had gone to the chicken house and hearing a noise discovered two men robbing the hen roost. He opened fire, being then killed by the intruders.

NEWARK BOY

ARRESTED ON THE CHARGE OF HORSE STEALING

Name is Robert C. Hoffman, Pitcher on College Team—Who Is Hoffman?

The Advocate this afternoon received the following press dispatch from Michigan City, Ind.:

"Michigan City, Ind., Aug. 12—Robert C. Hoffman of Newark, D. C. G. McDonald of Washington, D. C. who have been attending a university at Cleveland, Ohio, were arrested in this city Monday on the charge of horse stealing. Hoffman and McDonald hired two rigs at Laporte, and drove to this city, and it is alleged, sold them to A. F. Earl, a local liveryman. When taken to the police station they confessed saying that they had left college with the intention of taking positions on a civil engineering corps. Becoming stranded they took that method to reimburse themselves. Both profess to be of well-to-do families. Hoffman was a pitcher in his university team."

Inquiry about town fails to disclose who Robert C. Hoffman is. The name does not appear in the new directory just out.

PRECOCIOUS AUTHORS.

Successful Plays That Were Written by Boys in Their Teens.

Was a successful play ever written by a boy of fourteen? asks a correspondent. Yes. This asking a miracle has happened at least three times. The best known example of the precocious playwright is the celebrated Lope de Vega, the most prolific dramatist known to history. He produced his first play, a comedy, entitled "La Pastoral de Jacinto," before he had completed his fourteenth year, and this was considered such a marvelous performance that he is known to this day in Spanish literature as "the Prodigy of Nature." Another Spaniard and contemporary of Lope de Vega, Pedro Calderon, wrote his first play when he was thirteen. Metastasio wrote his tragedy "Giustino" and had it produced when he was fourteen on the stage at Bologna.

Of English playwrights Douglas Jerrold, the famous author of "Black-eyed Susan," also furnishes an answer to the question. In 1818, before he had completed his fifteenth year, he wrote a very well known farce entitled "More Delivered Than Hurt." It was very successful on the English stage, and the French considered it good enough to steal. Curiously enough, this French translation was retranslated into English and again produced on the English boards under the title of "Fighting by Proxy." Another very remarkable instance of a different sort of precocity was that of William Henry Ireland, who when he was about fifteen actually produced some plays which he attributed to Shakespeare and which, although afterward proved to be forgeries, were accepted by the experts of the time as genuine.—Pearson's Weekly.

PLOWING WITH ELEPHANTS

Barnum's Reply to the Farmer Who Asked Whether It Would Pay.

It may be said of P. T. Barnum that he was the major domo or lord of laughter and fun, the protean dispenser of amusement. How well he became known through this function one curious incident certifies. Some years before he died an obscure person in some remote part of Asia wrote a letter, which he dropped in the postoffice near him, directed to "Mr. Barnum, America." The letter reached this destination without an hour's delay. The great showman unaffectedly enjoyed being known from the very beginning of his celebrity, and when he found his celebrity was a tremendous factor in his success he did everything that he could think of to extend the exploitation of his name. This was not to nourish vain imaginings or because he felt enriched. It was to promote business.

Around his successive homes at Bridgeport, Conn., he was fond of putting something that suggested a show. Queerly marked cattle, the sacred cow or an elephant was frequently among the stock to be noticed in his fields. On one occasion he had an elephant engaged in plowing on the sloping hill where it could be plainly seen by the passengers on the New Haven and Hartford railroad, an agricultural innovation that he knew would get notice of some sort in every newspaper in the country. It was even said that he received letters from farmers far and wide asking how much hay one elephant ate and if it was more profitable to plow with an elephant than with horses or oxen. His replies were invariably frank and were of this purport: If you have a large museum in New York and a great railway sends trains full of passengers, it will pay, and pay well, but if you have no such institution then horses and oxen will prove more economical.—Joel Benton in Century.

WEDDING SUPERSTITIONS.

The bride should not fail to shed a few tears on her wedding day. It is an omen of good luck in the future.

It is unlucky for the bride to enter the church before the ceremony by one door and leave after the ceremony by another door.

The bride should always cut the first piece of her wedding cake and pour out the first glass of wine for her guests if there are not too many.

If the bride drops her handkerchief on the wedding day and the bridegroom picks it up, it is a sign that in the future he will play second fiddle.

It is said to be unlucky to tie the shoes to any part of the carriage in which the bride and bridegroom go away, but it is lucky to throw an old shoe after the bride as she enters the carriage.

In leaving the church the bride do well to place her right foot foremost if she wishes to be happy, healthy, etc., in the future, and she should always be the first to call her husband by name.

After the wedding breakfast and reception the bride should be careful to throw away and lose all the pins. If there are any about her. The bridesmaids should not keep the pins themselves or they will retard their chances of marriage.

Medicinal Uses of Salt.
Salt is one of the greatest of natural remedies and antiseptics. A weak solution—an even teaspoonful in a glass of water, cold or hot—is excellent for indigestion. A solution of about the same strength will often relieve a cold in the head if snuffed up through the nose.

Severe pains in the bowels are often relieved by the application of a bag of hot salt.

PURITY.

The ice cream social at Miles chapel Saturday night was fairly well attended, despite the inclemency of the weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hawke and daughter Hattie visited friends in Newark last week.

Mr. and Mrs. George Holton and son Sammie, Mr. and Mrs. Ike Bell and son Clem, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hilleary, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Riley, and Misses Allie Davis and Kittie Hawke were visitors at Wm Larason's Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jones and three children were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Mills, Sunday afternoon.

Our northern suburb, Jockburg, is now to have a blacksmith shop, which will be built on Samuel Schooler's lot and conducted by James Han, who is to move into the McCue property formerly owned by Newt Marriott.

Wm. Thompson, wife and son Fred called on Mr. and Mrs. Asa Schreder Sunday afternoon.

The P. of I. at Jockburg ordered another lot of goods last week, including 1000 pounds of sugar, two barrels of crackers, fifty pounds of cheese and other articles in less quantities.

Quite a pretty romance has lately come to light in this section. Samuel Magraw a well known and highly respected gentleman, formerly of this place but for the past two years a resident of Newark, came out to his pretty country residence last week, accompanied by a lady, an disputation was rife as to who the lady was. Several days elapsed before anything definite was found out, and then a neighbor, more daring than the rest, bore the lion in his den and came in his hall and learned that the lady is his wife and has occupied that honored position for the past three years. Some of the boys proposed the happy couple a charivari but owing to the age and respectability of the persons, the reposition was not acted upon.

COATS OFF IN CHURCH.

Pastor's Plan to Induce Men to Attend Services in Hot Weather.

In the Presbyterian church in Hartford township, near Sharon, Pa., the other day all the men in the congregation removed their coats at the suggestion of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Bailey, says the Philadelphia Press. The minister then said, "Now, brethren, you look cool, and I feel that you will more fully appreciate the sermon."

Rev. Mr. Bailey says the plan will have a tendency to bring more men to church.

GRANVILLE NOTES.

Mrs. L. H. Cammack of Huntington, W. Va., who has been the guest of her father, Mr. H. LaFerre for a few weeks, left this morning for a visit to Delaware and Dayton.

After a short visit with friends and relatives in the village, Miss Rachel Jones has returned to her home in Mansfield.

Mrs. Thomas Jones has been lying seriously ill at her home on Pearl street for some days.

"Jack" Williams of the Toledo Blade has been visiting his old home in the Welsh Hills for several days.

Mrs. E. L. Williams of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has been visiting at the home of Mr. Burton Case for the past week, left this morning for a short visit with friends in Columbus.

Miss Carrie Howland will leave for Columbus tomorrow where she will visit friends for a time.

Mr. F. M. Downer an old Licking county boy, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Downer of Granville, has recently been appointed by President Roosevelt as assayer in charge of the mint at Denver. Mr. Downer's home is in Longmont, Colorado.

Mr. P. B. Smith, a well known resident of Granville, was happily surprised on his birthday last Thursday.

The surprise was planned and carried out to a successful completion by Mr. Smith's wife and daughter, Miss Mable. A pleasant feature of the surprise was the unexpected presence at the family reunion of Mrs. Rev. R. B. Smith and two children of El Paso, Texas, who walked in unexpectedly on the happy party. Rev. R. B. Smith who came on Tuesday morning and who thought that his wife was still visiting in Ashton, W. Va., was also greatly surprised to see her at the reunion in Granville. The reunion was a complete success throughout and was highly enjoyed by all who were present and will linger long in pleasant memory.

BEATING THE TELEGRAPH

[Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company.]

Lazily Linyard watched the blue coated figure toiling slowly up the hill from the station. Who, he wondered, had sent a town messenger out to Woodcrest? He was half tempted to rise and meet the lad, but the June day had an enervating breath, and besides, the note might be for Clifford.

Clifford owned Woodcrest, and Linyard had only run down for the week end. Presently the boy's slow feet crunched upon the gravel walk. Clifford stepped out through the library window.

"Bet the cigars it's for you, Walt," he suggested, "or, better still, from Jane Burton."

Linyard flushed, though he tried to speak carelessly as he said, "I'll take you, for there's no such luck."

The boy was at the step now, and both men reached out their hands. "For Mr. Walter Linyard," the youngster said as he reached out a square envelope addressed in a hand that caused Linyard's heart to beat fast.

Clifford chuckled. "I win," he declared. And Linyard, deep in perusal of his letter, could only nod assent. The eager face turned to blank astonishment, however, as he read. When he reached the familiar signature, he began and read it all over again and then burst out:

"This is quite beyond me!"
"Any way I can help, old man?"

Linyard thrust the letter in his hand, and this is what Clifford read:

My Dear Mr. Linyard—Forgive me for my refusal to answer you when you did me the honor a week ago of asking me to marry you. I will have to explain the peculiar position in which I am placed.

When I made my debut in society last fall, my aunt, who, as you know, has been both father and mother to me, made me promise that I would accept no proposal until the end of my first season, and now that the season is ended I find myself in a dilemma. There are seven men among whom I really cannot decide. You are one of the seven.

I have therefore decided to leave the decision in the hands of fate and the enterprise of those who seek my hand. I am leaving on the American liner today, and I will accept the first proposal to reach me from one of the seven.

Letters similar to this will be delivered half an hour after the steamer sails to the other six, so that you may all have an even chance. It rests with you. Faithfully yours, JEANNETTE BURTON.

Clifford handed back the letter, with a low whistle. "Can't say I blame her much, though," he remarked. "She was by far the prettiest debutante of the season, and the chaps of our set are so much alike it's hard to choose between them. Going in to win?"

Linyard nodded, then squared his shoulders reassuringly as he said, "I'm going to cable Queenstown to catch the steamer in the channel."

"That will be nice," returned Clifford comfortably. "By that time she will have had time to write letters to four out of the other five telling them the lucky man got his wireless telegram aboard at Nantucket."

Linyard gritted his teeth. Then he turned to his friend desperately. "See here; I've simply got to get my proposal in first. How can I do it?"

As though bent on self destruction by persistently getting in the steamer's way. The first officer reached for the whistle cord.

As the hoarse notes boomed out across the water the yacht displayed the signal flags for "I want to speak to you," and a minute later, with engines stopped, the huge steamer lay to.

"New York, ahoy!" hailed the yachtman through the megaphone. "Is Miss Burton on board?"

There was a wild scramble among the passengers lining the rail. Presently a slender girlish figure mounted the bridge.

"This is Miss Burton," shouted the first officer, indicating her with his trumpet.

Clear and sharp came back the reply: "This is Mr. Linyard. I want to know if she will marry me?"

A cheer went up from the crowded deck. Then the answer rang back as clearly, "She says she will."

"Tell her I leave on Saturday's steamer. Thanks and goodbye."

A very much disgusted officer reached for the indicator and pulled it viciously to "full speed ahead."

On deck the Ariel, Linyard turned joyfully to his friend. "Jim," he said fervently, "there are times when a seaborne yacht beats even wireless telegraphy. Let's go below and offer up a libation to my engagement."

ETTES W. SARGENT.

Master of the Situation.

"It seems to me," said the man from the east, "that you stand a great deal more from that man who just left you than you would from anybody else."

"Yes," answered Pete Pete. "We've got to. He's one of our usefulest citizens, and if he gets arrogant he knows he's in a place where we can't resent it, 'cause if anybody got the drop on him it would stunk us for shore."

"Who is he?"
"The only undertaker in 200 miles."—Washington Star.

Recreat.

Mamma—Why, Willie, you asked for two pieces of candy and you got them. Aren't you satisfied?

Willie—No'm, I ain't. You gave up so easy I'm just kickin' myself 'cause I didn't ask you for more.—Philadelphia Press.

Sympathetic.

Recently a lithographic firm received a circular announcing the death of the head of a well known business house. In reply they wrote:

"We regret to learn the loss sustained by your firm in the death of Mr. — and beg to express our heartfelt sympathy."

"We notice your circular is printed by Messrs. —. We are confident that had you asked us we could have quoted you cheaper and better than any other firm in the market, and in the event of a future bereavement we hope you will afford us an opportunity of making you an offer."—London Tit-Bits.

Don't Be Foolish.

Look at your friends and acquaintances. You see them deliberately acting the fool every day. Possibly you can look your friends over with less prejudice than you can look yourself over. Are you acting the fool and causing yourself unnecessary annoyance? There are so many foolish people in the world that you often find starting things in looking yourself over with candor and fairness.—Atchison Globe.

Breathing of Insects.

Insects generally breathe through special pores in various parts of their bodies, and if these pores are closed by oil they are suffocated. Any one may test this by dropping sweet oil on the thorax or back of a wasp. It very soon dies. For this reason oil has been found one of the best things to use for the destruction of insects.

Strictly Business.

"Have you observed that man who has been abusing you?"
"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum placidly. "I've been watching him with a great deal of interest. If I wanted anybody abused, I don't know but I should hire him in preference to anybody I know of."—Washington Star.

THIRTY DAY FAST.

Nutritive Salts; that of coffee by Postum Cereal, Kneipp Malt Barley Coffee, roasted wheat coffee; of vinegar by lemon juice or other natural acid; of French soups by purees of bean, split pea, tomato, etc., or those based on Wahl's Bouillon Stock (vegetable); of white flour by whole wheat flour from Franklin Mills or Purina Mills—or gluten flour—or even rye, barley, and banana flour and corn meal; of salt and other meats by nuts, legumes, eggs, cheese, and milk; of oatmeal and common Breakfast foods by "Oatnuts," Force, Malt, Vita, Granose, Grape-Nuts, and Shredded Wheat Biscuit; of cod-liver oil by olive oil, coconut extractions, nut oils; of commercial cocoa by Lahnman's Nutritive Salts Cocoa or Biltz Health Cocoa or Malt Creamlet Cocoa, or Cocovena; of desserts, preserves and pastries by the same articles properly composed, prepared, and eaten; of raw water by aerated-distilled from stills of Ralston make, Puritan, or Cuprigrath; of soda-fountain mixtures by grape, orange and other fruit juices and sherbets, malted milk, buttermilk, koumyss, etc.; and so on through the list. Information in detail, prices, etc., as to these special foods may be had from the Naturopathic Supply company, 111 East 59th, New York City.

EXERCISE AND BATHS.

The fast was accompanied by exercise and baths, though not systematically or after any specified fashion. I don't believe in routine of any kind under the most favorable conditions, and certainly not during a fast. But I delight in the exuberant exhilaration of rational exercise. As for Hydrotherapy, that is always a valuable adjunct toward the regaining and maintaining of health, but must be modified when the system is of lowered vitality. For instance, a full cold bath is often too severe, but a cold sitz, or just natural bath, or half ablation, or local compress and douche—some one of these is always helpful and available. In my case—liver congestion and enlargement—the alternating compress or gush is the best local treatment, preceded by massage and vigorous movements for lungs, abdomen and liver.

I use no single system of physical culture, having preferred to take the best principles from many specialist systems, add other individual points, and make my own plan. Physical culture is usually a misnomer as taught by professional athletes. It should be based on temperament, condition, mentality, and individuality, the Swoboda system being best for the mental temperament, the Von Boeckmann for the motive, and the Macfadden for the vital.

It is decidedly essential to include local therapeutic measures throughout the fast, together with sun and air baths, massage when necessary, long walks, and always and forever deep breathing. This latter point is usually omitted by professional fasters, save perhaps Dr. Hanish, the sun worshipper psychic of Chicago.

FASTING A NEGATIVE PROCESS.

Fasting at best is only a negative process and a very rudimentary one at that—anybody who considers and uses it as a summum bonum will find it a disastrous and dangerous conclusion.

BIG TRIP ON EMPTY STOMACH.

I have already wearied you and shall not give detailed proofs of the splendid endurance and increase of strength during the fast. All previous experiences of scores of others have corroborated mine—that weakness, weariness, fatigue and the other alleged concomitants of overwork are simply uric acid and unassimilated food in the system; and the man on a fast never "catches cold" and never gets tired. On the 24th day I left for the mountains early in the morning, returning late at night. And if you've ever heard of the limitless aspiration of the West Virginia Hills, then you may know what an all-day tramp would mean. There wasn't any appreciable difference between my strength and that of my companions.

YOUR APPETITE

It is a well known fact that your stomach is the center of your system. If it is out of order, the rest of your system is out of order. A few doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will restore your appetite and your health in general will be better. It cures indigestion, loss of appetite, indigestion, dyspepsia and constipation.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS

who had eaten some sixty meals since I had touched any.

This answers your questions, at least approximately. And I forbear a further trespass on your patience that would depend from the other points I had planned to go over. Just a word more.

FASTING IS NO JOKE.

Fasting, whether for physical or psychical purposes, is emphatically not a joke. It is not a plaything for a child, or a fetish for a faddist, or a panacea for a drug-doped invalid. I am very certain that systematic fasting and scientific feasting are the elementary essentials in the thorough regeneration we all need before we can ever grow.

But Mount Ararat never came to Noah, nor Mount Sinai to Moses, nor Mount Hermon to Jesus until the Deluge and the Wilderness and the Garden of Gethsemane had proved to Noah and Moses and Jesus that they were different from other men—and had outgrown triumphantly and everlastingly the beliefs and habits and limitations and ideals of the unthinking herd.

I believe the extreme fast is a most vital preparation for the Garden of Gethsemane that must attend each individual Christ-incarnation. For every human may make his own Mount of Transfiguration, when he has met and faced and conquered Gethsemane.

PHILOSOPHY OF A FAST.

I trust that through your continued courtesy, the philosophy of my 30 day fast may by this time have become more apparent and the long article I am preparing to be published soon in the Naturopath and Herald of Health, will include many new rules and personal experiences that should be helpful to those interested, theoretically or tentatively.

Yours for perennial health,
EDWARD EARLE PURINGTON.

P. S.—Monday morning, August 11. On later thought I have decided to wait over the second day after "breaking," to note the improvement. It has been most rapid and gratifying—haven't felt so buoyant for ten years.

HE VIOLATED THE RULES.

Yesterday I purposely violated all the rules of the Fasting Brotherhood and had one meal include sardines, nuts and hard-boiled eggs—three of the toughest propositions that ever struck the stomach. Not as an example for other timorous fasters—such a proceeding would be fatal for everybody who hasn't outgrown the law that forbids these foods. But the whole meal digested beautifully and completely—and I have proved the possibility of superiority to law.

There are no "Laws of Nature"—no "Laws of God." A law is a crude working formula that marks the measure of man's expansion by the limitation of his explanation. And I find the exalted exultation of the fearless individualist in breaking the objective, external, physical law of short-sighted materialism, and reaching out and up into the Divine Lawlessness of Love.

ALL WERE SAVED.

"For years I suffered such untold misery from Bronchitis," writes J. H. Johnson, of Broughton, Ga., "that often I was unable to work. Then, when everything else failed, I was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. My wife suffered intensely from Asthma, till it cured her, and all our experience goes to show it is the best Croup medicine in the world." A trial will convince you it's unrivaled for Throat and Lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Hall's Drug Store.

Galsborough and His Carries.

One of the earliest members of the Royal Academy, it was Galsborough's custom to have his pictures conveyed to the metropolis by a prosperous London carrier, a Mr. Wiltshire of Stockerwick, near Bath. This man refused to accept payment on the ground that he loved pictures too well. He was not, however, allowed to go unrewarded, for Galsborough presented him with six of his best works, and some idea of their ultimate value may be gained from the fact that when at length they were sold the National Gallery secured two, "The Parish Clerk of Bradford-on-Avon," for 500 guineas, and "The Harvest Wagon," for 12,500, these prices being considered low. Later "The Sisters" from another gallery realized close upon 100,000.

Nature and Poetry.

Environment aids poetry, but does not create it. Nature is the grand agent in making poetry, and poetry is present wherever nature is. It sparkles on the sea, glows in the rainbow, flashes from the lightning and the stars, peals in thunder, roars in the cataract and sings on the winds. Poetry is God's image reflected in nature, as in a mirror, and nature is present wherever man is.

Royal Blue Book.

"Gettysburg" is the leading feature of the August number Book of the Royal Blue, the entertaining monthly magazine of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. The great battle is the subject of an interesting sketch by General H. S. Huldekooper, of Philadelphia, accompanied by his topographical map and many recent views of such prominent places on the field as Devil's Den, The Angle, High Water Mark Clump of Trees Peach Orchard, etc. The story of the great three days fight is followed up by a description of the odd monuments on the field, and why they were erected. Whether by design or chance two beautiful and appropriate poems appear in this number entitled "The Flag" and "Soldiermen, Bent and Gray," by Mr. W. D. Nesbit, whose humorous and pathetic poems have attracted wide attention throughout the country. In the "Stub Ends of Thought" are some clever aphorisms, and altogether this number has an especial tinge of patriotism and humanity about it.

More Coaches for B. & O.
Orders have been placed with the Pullman company by the B. & O. railroad for the construction of 50 new passenger coaches of several descriptions. Some are to be of the wide vestibuled variety, for use on through express trains, while others will be of the ordinary type. It is expected that at least half of this order will be delivered to the local division to relieve the present scarcity of passenger equipment in this territory.

Local Railway Notes.

The clerk replied that when he checked 98 down he would check No. 2 back and then he would have one.

AMUSEMENTS.

In announcing the appearance at the Auditorium tomorrow night, Aug. 13, of Willis Maxwell Goodhue's jolly comedy, "Hello Bill," Manager Rosebrough confidently predicts that his patrons will enjoy one of the greatest comedy treats he has yet given them. For the benefit of those who do not know what "Hello Bill" is, it may be said that this most amusing of later-day comedies is an absurd conglomeration of ridiculous situations brought about by "Bill's" acting like a true descendant of the father of lies, thus leading to a lot of the funniest complications that ever were thought of by farce writers. To escape going to jail for an escapade he hides for three months and in the meantime makes his bride of a few minutes believe he is a General in the United States Army fighting for Cuba. The real General whose identity he has attempted to assume, comes upon the scene just as "Bill" is about to be given a reception by his townspeople. Incidental to the plot are scores of other absurdities and it is not exaggeration to say that laughing never ceases. The company engaged in this year's presentation of the merry play is a notable one, including in its ranks such well known and capable players as Harry Corson Clarke, S. S. Wiltzie, Arthur L. Cogizer, Frank W. Glenn, Gideon Burton, Robert Watt, Margaret Dale Owen, Pauline M. Hickler, Mildred Claire, Kathryn Vincent and Marion Kirby.

CIRCUS HERE TOMORROW.

Residents of this country who have traveled on the other side know that Hagenbeck is an amusement caterer, is to the old world what John Robinson is to the new. Just two months ago John P. Robinson, the acknowledged King of Showmen, purchased a herd of four educated elephants from Hagenbeck. Their act is now a feature of the John Robinson Show, which will exhibit at Newark tomorrow.

EFFECT OF A KIND WORD.

Al G. Field, the famous minstrel, says that the prettiest compliment he ever had passed upon him, came from a ragged little newsgirl.

One cold night last winter, Mr. Field was walking down a street, when he noticed a thinly clad child selling papers on a corner. Stopping, as is his wont, to patronize the little creature, and observing how thin her clothing was, he asked: "Are you not very cold, little girl?"

"I was, sir, until you passed," she responded quickly.

The compliment is appreciated by Mr. Field as the most delicate of which he has ever been the recipient. Auditorium, August 18.

St. Louis Lad Robbed Houses While Father Waited Outside for the Plunder.

St. Louis, Aug. 12.—With his 12 year-old son, Philip, to do the climbing and stealing, Alexander Nicholas, aged 60, with hair as white as snow, was making a success as a burglar when detectives descended on his home, a little frame shanty on Florissant street, opposite the Bellefontaine Cemetery, and arrested him. The police declare Nicholas is wanted in Pennsylvania and Ohio, where he employed the same methods in robbery. The boy was found at the home of his mother, who is living apart from her husband, and arrested. He will be held as a witness against his father. When old Nicholas was arrested he denied his guilt, saying the boy had told the story out of a desire to secure revenge because he had chastised him for a misdeed.

Their mode of procedure was for the father to send the boy up a porch and he would receive the plunder.

BLIND BUT HAPPY

Mrs. Alice Washington, Who Lives on Fifth Street, This City Does All Her Own Housework, Cooks, Sews, Mends and Keeps Home Tidy.

If the question should be put to 10,000 people, "What is the greatest affliction that could come to you?" the answer in almost every case would be, "Total blindness."

It is hard for one in the enjoyment of his unimpaired sight, to realize the deprivation, the circumscribed sphere of activity, the many inconveniences that follow from a lack of eye sight.

These can not be overestimated, nor can they be measured by any absolute standard. Charles Broadway House, the late millionaire New York merchant, for many years before death, was totally blind, and had a standing offer of $1,000,000 to any one who could restore his lost vision. Science was powerless, and the philanthropic millionaire could never enjoy the external beauties of many objects of his generosity.

The law of recompense is apparent throughout nature, and in no instance is it more striking than in the case of a person deprived of one faculty. The others, maybe one in particular, are sharpened as it were, and we oftentimes see a person who seems to almost hear with the eye, or see with the ear.

The blind poet, Milton, many assert, could never have had the sublime conception, given to the world in Paradise Lost, if he had not been able to commune with his inmost spirit, and feel and recognize the impressions originating there and given to him.

These impressions were born of the man's spirit, and were not induced nor influenced by external surroundings. The sense of touch, in some blind people, seems to be abnormally sensitive and yet we cannot help but wonder where the law of compensation sometimes has practical application to specific cases of affliction. Where could there have been a more completely sad incident than when the great composer Beethoven, sat in a large theatre and saw the vast audience moved to demonstrative raptures at the orchestra's rendition of one of his sublime symphonies, not a note of which the stone deaf musician could hear? It seems that this was the acme of exquisite suffering to his sensitive soul.

And yet, while the comparative suffering of deprivation, caused by the loss of any faculty must be subjective to a great extent, that of blindness in the popular belief, is the hardest to bear. And yet every one's observation will convince him that those who do not see have usually, cheerful sunny dispositions and enjoy society and life, while the deaf are generally morose, sullen and inclined to be retiring not to say hermitic.

When we see a person totally blind but performing many acts of duty and pleasure, that are done by their seeing friends, that person becomes interesting because unusual.

Such a person was met Tuesday morning by the reporter in his daily rounds, in the person of Mrs. Alice Washington, a colored woman who lives at 257 North Fifth street, with her husband, Charles Washington, who is employed as a hod carrier by Mr. Tod Abbott.

Mrs. Washington was born in Ravenna, Ohio, 35 years ago. As a girl she was like our playmates in every respect. As she approached womanhood an illness overtook her and for ten years she suffered, her eyes during that time giving much trouble. A cataract formed on the right eye, and to save the left she had it removed, but the other eye was affected, and in 1897 she became totally blind. She was told she could never see again in this world, but she did not mope or uselessly grieve, but set about to make her life as happy as possible, and today a more contented, happier woman does not live in Newark.

Six years ago she married, and although she has never seen her husband, they are devoted to each other. He cheerfully works every day while his blind wife attends to the household duties just as other women. She does her own washing, ironing, scrubbing, sweeping and cooking, and her house is cosy and absolutely perfect by neat and clean.

She showed the reporter a number of cans of fruit that she put up this summer absolutely unaided by any one.

Mrs. Washington is a woman who appears educated and refined. Her conversation is far above that of the average woman of her race. Her words are well chosen, and the sentences perfectly rounded, and grammatically correct.

Her schooling consisted of a public school course in Ravenna, Columbus and Norwalk. She has had no tuition specially adapted to her condition. She neither reads raised print nor does fancy work, but is an adept at plain sewing. All her sheets, pillow cases, aprons, etc., are her handiwork, and I patch all my husband's clothes and keep them in good condition," she said, and facetiously added, "which is more than many women do who have two good eyes," to which the reporter readily agreed.

She can also write if the occasion demands, a very legible hand, but her husband does most of this for her. She never ventures on the street alone, and said this morning:

"Blind men seem to have that gift which is denied to women afflicted the same way. I have never seen a blind woman go about the street alone, but there are many men who do. But woman's place is at home anyway, and that probably accounts for it."

Mrs. Washington has applied for the $100 annual pension, authorized to be paid by the county to blind people, and there is no one more deserving of it than she.

"Well, Mrs. Washington, you have a nice home, and appear perfectly happy and contented," said the writer.

"Yes, indeed I am. No one could be happier. There are many worse things could befall one than blindness. I am thankful I am as well off as I am. My husband is a noble man as true and faithful as my own right hand. He is good to me, others are kind to me, and above all God is good to me. I leave everything to Him, and try to do His will. I am assured and thoroughly believe that this blindness only affects the temporal body, and that in God's good time, I shall go to Him, and shall see Him as He is."

With such sublime faith and trust, it is no wonder that Mrs. Washington is contented and happy, and that she is a helpful lesson in how to live by a call on the blind negro woman in her humble home on North Fifth street.

CHAIR STOLEN—Last Saturday night thieves visited the premises of Mrs. Bell, widow of the late Hon. William Bell, Jr., and stole a chair that had been presented to Mr. Bell by John Laffin, deceased, the veteran policeman, when Mr. Bell was Mayor of the city. The thieves also carried away some fine ferns from the premises of Mr. Charles Dickinson on Locust street.

COAL STRIKE SCENES.

Aspects and Contrasts in the Anthracite Fields.

FINE VILLAS OF THE OPERATORS

How the Rich and the Poor Live. Happy Holidays For the Mine Mules—Running Mines and Managing Miners—An Irish Groom's Devotion to His Employer—Bad Temper of Reckless Strikers.

Movement is halted; there is a sense as of something tremendous always impending, writes the New York Evening Post's special correspondent at Shenandoah, Pa. You pass miles and miles of empty coal cars on the sidings; freight yards are choked with cold and idle locomotives, close packed, not a man near them. In the valleys the grimy, black breakers, angular, lopsided structures, high and huge, having indeed a look of inanimate malignancy, squat in exasperating patience on great dismal hills of their own dust and waste. They desolate the landscape; nothing grows upon them, and around them everything is wild. Excepting these culm piles and the tall, stark breakers there is no sign of the method by which the people in the tawdry villages gain a livelihood. The rest is underground.

Many railroads cut along the hillsides and send switches down to the mouths of the pits which the breakers cover. The other morning, from the car window, three different roads (built in days of competition), with their spurs, were visible from the car windows as we ran along a mountain slope, and not a car moving on any of them. In huckleberry pastures you saw blue forms, muscular men in unsoiled jeans stooping over the small bushes with pails and baskets; at stations there were numbers of them, silent, but not stolid, and you could see they were not, even after three months, used to loafing. A few had changed their "shift" or working clothes for mufti, and with odd black trunks bearing Hungarian or Italian railway labels were going to other fields or home to the old countries.

Twice outside Scranton and Mahanoy City strikers were seen on the huge culm piles trying to pick good coal out of the refuse to carry home to sell. Nearly all companies have forbidden this, and those special guards for mining regions, the coal and iron police, recruited largely in the tough places of cities, patrol the properties and camp within the stockades.

In the midst of these torn valleys somewhere there is often a villa, where the superintendent of the mines or the operator or the owner dwells. When you pass through the exquisite grill gate, you are in grounds like those over by Wheatley hills, and around them is a high fence, shutting out all sight of the raw brown gashes and the drear, gloomy hills of slate colored dross and leaving only a view of the tops of the green mountains and the sky. The fence itself is hidden by trimmed hedges; the lawns are smooth shaven, with numerous sorts of stunted and outlandish trees, poplars brought by the owner as souvenirs of a tour through Lombardy, pines from Fontainebleau, and a formal garden suggested by one in England where he was entertained. The edges of the walks are as precisely straight as the edges of a T square; the walks are pebbled with small white conglomerate from the mountains.

The house is covered to the eaves with ivy and honeysuckle and morning glory, and Dutch pipes spread their wide leaves over the veranda trellis with the regularity of shingles. There is a small pine grove carpeted with brown needles, rustic seats and places for hammocks. The stable is, though small, as beautiful within as George Gould's, at Lakewood—silver shining in glass wall cases, bit mounted harnesses gleaming in others and half a dozen Brewster carriages and carts and runabouts and omnibuses keeping fresh and glossy under white sheets. There are only four horses—the operator is an automobilist—but their stalls are a delight. They are the last word in stallmaking. Through a screen door, which lets in pure air while keeping out flies, there is the cow stable, immaculate, its straw sweeter than hotel beds in many of the Caribbees.

And outside are the cows, Jerseys, pure in breed, wholesome to look at, pretty as those painted by Van Marcke, grazing on a velvet lawn. A gate opens into the golf course, smoothly rolled, closely cropped, with tees for wet weather and other tees for dry. Oaks and elms are the hazards, except for one artificial bunker, which has not been permitted to put any difficulty in the way of the links being a picture. The name of the links is Guess Where. Out of it you open a gate in the hedge to the mule yard.

It is cut up as though with the frolics of a thousand hoofs. You are surprised to learn that it was really cut up by 3,000, and the mules are in three or four long, temporary structures put up hurriedly last May when the strike was declared, to be torn down when the strike is ended. The mules are eating their supper. Each day they eat a quart of corn and a quart of oats and seven pounds of hay per head, and are sleek and fat. Some of them had not been up out of the underground tunnels where they work for twelve years. None had been up for five or six unless it was to go to the well appointed mule hospital. When they were brought up, they were stunned by the sunlight. They were turned out to grass and did not know what to do. They smelled the air and looked off great distances and put their noses to the field, and then, after awhile, they laid themselves down and in sudden access of joy rolled and kicked and nipped one another on the neck. It must have been lovely. Outside all this, beyond the pallings and the hedgerows, are the culm piles, higher than the St. Paul building (New York), some of them like volcanoes in form and not unlike Pelee in utter bareness, and near them, perhaps on a green slope, are the mining settlements.

We light the automobile and start. Opportunity for contrasts, you think—the operator's villa and the miner's cabin; a hothouse of perfect flowers here and a bunch of paper roses on the mantel there; everything comfortable to one's desire within and the harshness of the lot of the common worker without. But the contrast strikes you only as the contrast of life everywhere. There are those above us and below us in fortune in whatever sphere we dwell, and the test—isn't it?—is whether we treat them as we ought, decent respect without obsequiousness for those above, nothing but kind generosity for those below. I know operators and owners in these valleys—unfortunately I am withheld from being specific—who have all their lives accepted "the tax of befriending poverty and weakness" and have been helpful and considerate with their dependents. Their wives have sewed strong garments and built hospitals and mechanics' institutes for them, and when there was a deficiency in the township school fund, as there is usually each year, the husbands have paid it up. Many of the families which own the mines now lease them to railroads, but they retain a little concern and interest, not perhaps as much as before, in the workers. Some of the original owners were themselves miners or plain farmers and by industry, thrift and special cleverness were enabled to buy land at $10 an acre, underneath which, later, coal was found, and their descendants thus came by their present ability to live in villas merely by taking royalty on each ton their property yields to the lessees.

There is a band of strikers on the bridge as we cross in the automobile. The operator greets them; all of them answer but one. "That dark young fellow who would not speak to me," the operator says, "is one of those who started the difficulty here. Strikes come in cycles, big ones about once in ten years. When we've adjusted things with one set of workers, the mule boys and the breaker boys grow up, and then they get to discussing themselves, and the older ones are influenced, as one is always, by his environment and companions. Did you ever notice that strike leaders are always young men?"

The miners' houses were roomy and neat and above the average and better than many thousands of workmen in New York city have to live in even after the Tenement House association has prosecuted the landlords. But in other places, at Hickory Ridge, outside Shamokin, and at a place between Shenandoah and Girardville, and at Ashley, south of Wilkesbarre, there are, indeed, some pitifully inadequate habitations, in what city people would call the slum quarters. But I am speaking of scarcely a dozen buildings altogether of this bad sort in the eighteen mining villages I have seen.

One of the unhappy phases of this strike is that the very persons whom superintendents, owners and operators helped the most are now the most rabid and inciting and most eager to do them injury. There may have been something wrong with the method of caring for them. Frequently we make our relief to the poor either so painful or so ungracious that they rather die than take it. But I have heard of a pleasant appreciation, too, how in the Schuylkill region on the night of the Shenandoah riot an Irish groom paced all night long, up and down on guard, before the gate of the house of his employer (a mine operator) with a revolver in his hand and never let him know about it. A rich man who has the sort of character to enlist secret devotion like that cannot be altogether a hard master.

In the anthracite cities there is almost the Sunday appearance that there is in the valleys. Hotels are empty, callboys and waiters lag about, and the halls have echoes; street corners are full of men saying little; other men in shirt sleeves sit on their porches reading newspapers and smoking with an air of feeling themselves out of their element with nothing to do. When you enter a store, you find yourself the only one there. Street cars run only at long intervals, and conductors and motormen are on half time. Practically no business is being done. Many saloons have had to quit. Here in Shenandoah state soldiers in khaki, galloping orderlies and cavalrymen and a provost guard holding up every one at the lines at night who has no passport make the city seem like invaded territory. On account of restraint forcefully imposed there are silliness and desperate thoughts and even desperate action among the reckless element, as when in the dark the other morning they shot at and stoned the camping soldiers from behind laurel bushes.

Sporting Notes.

Only one game, five points, separates St. Louis from Chicago in the American League, the latter club leading. The other clubs are also in close punches. It is certainly a great race in the American and the interest is at ever heat all over the circuit. In the cities that have clubs fighting for the first four places, the enthusiasm is natural, while at other places the people realize that although their team cannot win the pennant, they can make and make champions.

"Rube" Waddell comes near to being the greatest yet. His pitching is marvelous and he seems to be inde- fatigable. Monday he pitched thirteen innings at Detroit, with not a sign of weakening, and only five hits were made off him. In the thirteenth he won his own game making a three bag- ger and scoring on a scratch single. His grotesque antics on the field, with his great pitching, make him one of the greatest drawing cards in the American League.

The game Monday at Cleveland was a terrific slugging match, the Blues making 24 hits including eight two baggers and winning 17 to 11.

Clarke an amateur from Wooster, O. succeeded Wright for Cleveland Monday, and made a good impression. La-joie seems to be in need of pitchers. If he had several twirlers like Bern- hard, his team's baiting would put them in every game.

Corbett-McGovern Fight.

New London, Conn., Aug. 12.—The prospects of holding the Corbett-McGovern fight in this city on August 29 are now regarded as very good. The statement of state attorney Lucas that he will convene the superior court and that steps will be taken to stop the fight, is believed to settle the matter. It is stated that the principals will surely be arrested if they appear in the ring and that should they appeal their cases and attempt to fight they will be re-arrested. Manager W. L. Crowley, however, says that he will commence work on the seats today or Wednesday. It was reported that the fight would take place in Middletown.

When asked if any change had been made Manager Crowley said: "This is news to us. People generally know other people's business better than their own."

String of Newark Horses.

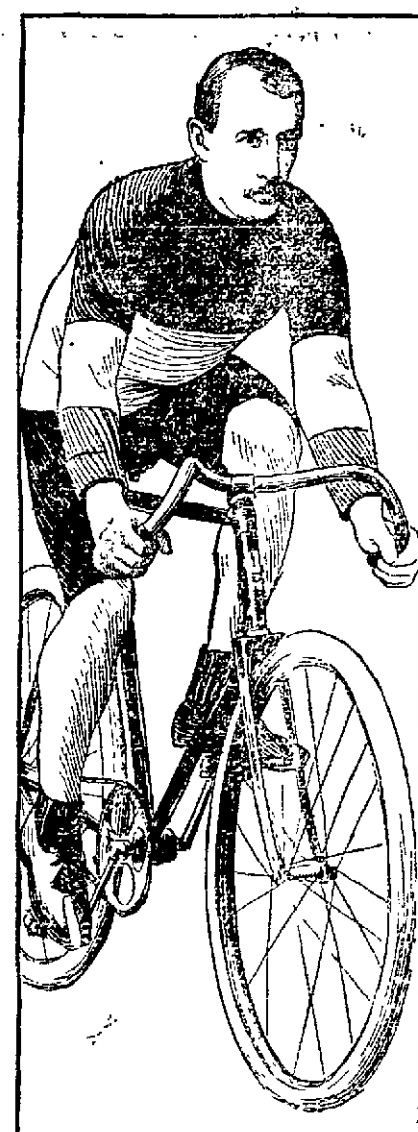

N. E. Vanatta this morning shipped his string of five harness horses, trotters and pacers, to Washington C. H. and Urbana. Two of them go to Washington C. H., and three to Urbana. They have been entered in the races which take place in these cities this week.

A BALL GAME.

The Brushy Fork base ball team played their representative team of Lock on Saturday, at Lock and the Brushy Fork boys were returned victors by a score of 15 to 11. Earl Lane pitched for Brushy Fork, while three pitchers for Lock attempted in vain to stem the tide of defeat. The Brushy Fork team now claims the championship as it has now won two games. Another may be played, if the Lock team can find courage to go down to Brushy Fork.

"Plunger Bill's" Career.

William Martin, known through the world as "Plunger Bill," the greatest all around cyclist, will be a competitor in many of the grand circuit races during the summer. Martin has been campaigning for twenty years and, although he now is forty-two years of age, is still regarded as one of the lead- ing racing men.

"Plunger Bill," who gained his sobri- quet because he is particularly at home in handicap events, pushing a remark- ably high gear and plugging along steadily, has won races of every de- scription from a quarter of a mile to a six day race. He has won races in all parts of the globe, and his winnings amount to $50,000. A large portion of this was won through betting on his chances. In Australia he won the greatest annual event and, besides the purse, cashed in about $10,000 in bets.

Martin was born in Detroit. He won a bicycle race four years, before Arthur Zimmerman, who retired four years ago, won his novice race. Zimmerman collapsed, but Martin continues to ride faster and better in every race.

Before he entered the ranks of racing cyclists Martin was a noted pedestrian and won many races in the west. Martin entered the professional ranks in 1890. His first professional race was 100 miles for the championship of Nebraska. In this race Martin was thrown and was thought to have been killed. He died up a ghastly wound in his head with a handkerchief, however, and, remounting his wheel, continued in the race and won. Martin arrived in New York recently

Making Baseballs.

Cincinnati supplies practically the entire middle west with baseballs, and something like 125 people earn a living in the baseball factories of the city.

The process of making baseballs on a wholesale plan is a rather interesting one, consuming in a single season something like 8,000 skins. The scrapings from the shoe factories, of which the "raw" balls are molded, are stored in cellars of about one acre area, and from this material the balls are shaped by hand. According to quality, the ball is bound by a few or several dozen rounds of cord. The "raw" balls are placed in automatic molds, shaping the balls and at the same time pressing out all moisture to the tune of 250 gross a day. One employee will shape as many as 4,000 of the raw balls in a single working day.

The newly pressed balls are then sorted and allowed to dry out for a period of from three to four weeks, when their weight is reduced to per- haps five ounces. Something like 250 of these twine bound leather balls can be found in the bins at all times.

English Derby Entries.

The entries for the Derby for 1904 include five horses of King Edward's stud, three belonging to Lord Rose- bery and seven from Richard Croker's stables. William C. Whitney and other American owners also have num- erous entries. The Duke of Portland, with ten horses entered, promises to take a prominent position, which he has not assumed in recent years. All the owners mentioned have entries for the Oaks also. The American entries for the Derby number thirty-six and for the Oaks twenty-one.

Will Stick to Collins.

With Wolverton going to Philadel- phia and Mullen of Detroit jumping to New York, the friends of the Ameri- can league in Boston city are inquiring about the Collins team. The most careful investigation finds all the boys entirely satisfied, and none is even thinking of jumping from Boston, al- though some have been indirectly ap- proached by agents of the National league.

How to Raise Flowers in the House.

A tiny garden can be made by cut- ting a piece of sheet wadding to fit the top of a bowl or a wide mouthed jar which is filled with water just high enough for the bottom of the wadding to touch it. Two or three small bits of charcoal will keep the water pure, and when all is arranged the top of the wadding is sprinkled with seeds of mignonette, sweet pea or any other easily grown plant. The roots pierce down through the wadding and are nourished by the water, while leaves and blossoms in a reasonable time conceal the top.

SCHOOL CODE

MAY BE ALTERED BY THE STATE LEGISLATURE

Bill Has Been Drawn by Bonebrake Despite the Opposition of Gov. George K. Nash.

Columbus, O., Aug. 12—It certainly does look as if Governor Nash is not going to have his own way in the matter of dictating to the General Assembly what subjects it will consider in coming special session. The Chief Executive has persistently opposed the consideration of anything save the municipal code and the Royer Supreme Court law, this opposition being aimed at the correction of the school code. In this last instance he is being fought by Senator Samuel L. Patterson, of Pike County; Representative Charles Seese of Summit County, and by State School Committees in their various branches of the Legislature and authors of important educational laws.

They insist that the school code ought to be revised at this session, and Representative Seese will take the bull by the horns by introducing a bill which has been prepared by Commissioner Bonebrake. The Governor also finds his policy opposed by Congressman Dick, who said: "It seems that a new school code is just as important, in view of the Supreme Court's decision against special legislation, as a code for the government of the municipalities."

"But Governor Nash is opposed to any revision of the school law at this time."

"I know that," said General Dick, "and I cannot quite understand his position."

"Do you know what Senator Hanna's position is?"

"Yes; Senator Hanna feels just as I do about the school laws. He thinks they should be revised, and I have no doubt that this will be done."

BUTTERINE

COULD BE COLORED WITH PALM OIL THINKS PIRRUNG.

Columbus Man is Confident the Internal Revenue Commission Will Agree to this Plan.

Columbus, Aug. 12—The butterine and oleomargarine companies throughout the country have been experimenting for some time with the view to finding a suitable coloring matter to take the place of the old butter color which they are prohibited, under the new law from using and they believe they have found just what they have been searching for, in the palm oil, which comes from Africa.

Manager C. Pirrung of the Capital City Dairy Company of this city, has been in Washington for the last week consulting with the internal revenue commission for the purpose of securing permission to use the new color matter, and returned to Columbus on Sunday. He spent some time in exhibiting the product before the commission and explaining its properties, and says that he believes the commission is favorably impressed with it. The commission now has the matter under advisement and has promised to render a decision in regard to it some time this week.

Palm oil is a purely vegetable product, and comes from Africa, where it is used by the natives as a substitute for butter. Thus far, those who have been investigating the matter, have found the oil absolutely harmless, and should the commission render a favorable decision upon it, it will be put into use at once by the manufacturers and butterine of the natural butter color will be placed on sale at the same price that obtained before the tax was put upon it.

In order to kill off mosquitoes owners of property in Greater New York on which there are pools and marshes have been asked to drain the land, fill it in or sprinkle it with oil.

Of Proposed Electric Road Between Newark and Mt. Vernon via Martinsburg, Knox County.

The engineers making the survey for the proposed electric road from Mt. Vernon to Newark report that they have completed the survey and obtained the right of way as far as Martinsburg. They appear to have some trouble getting into Martinsburg as many persons oppose the road in that village. It is thought, however, that the right of way can be obtained.—Mt. Vernon Banner.
